

RosettaNet Community Update

January 2011 Edition

High Tech and Electronics Industry Survey

At the end of 2010, RosettaNet initiated a strategic outreach program directed to the High Tech and Electronics Industry with the goal of developing a better understanding of the expectations and needs of the community both now and in the future. The first step in this process is an online survey jointly sponsored by RosettaNet and GS1 US. While the response has been strong, we need to insure that all aspects of the supply chain are well represented.

Your input is very valuable to us and, more importantly, to the High Tech and Electronics community. If you would like to participate in the survey please contact Hussam.El-Leithy@RosettaNet.org for more information.

B2B Implementer and Developer Updates

EDIFICE

At the 112th EDIFICE Plenary meeting in November 2010, EDIFICE announced its new branding going forward as “The European Network for B2B Integration in High Tech Industries”. The focus is being put on the Networking aspect striving to expand its Network and collaboration both on human interaction level and on Technical level. B2B Integration remains the main discussion topic and the forum is open to all High Tech related organisations of all sizes.

The 112th Plenary highlighted the importance of integrating Small & Medium sized enterprises (SME) and came to the conclusion that big organisations might want to step down to the level of the SME and provide lightweight B2B solutions that serve the purpose for all.

The B2B Process Adoption Task group is working on the simplification of data structures and business models and will publish its first deliverables by the end of Q2 2011.

The next Plenary # 113 will look at how Customer Business Model requirements challenge High Tech Supply Chains. This meeting takes place on 2-3 March 2011 at STMicroelectronics in Paris.

EDIFICE will celebrate its 25th anniversary in June 2011 with a splashing Plenary at Siltronic in Munich. The Theme will be around: Integrated Supply Chains: Achievements and a Look to the Future.
